

DETROIT SCHOOL RESEARCH PECHA KUCHA

Friday, March 29, 2013 / 4:00 p.m.
Pendleton Room of the Michigan Union

Japanese for “chit chat,” a pecha kucha is a presentation format in which each presenter is allowed 20 images, displayed for 20 seconds each. After 6 minutes and 40 seconds, the next presenter is up.

The presenters at this pecha kucha are graduate students and postdoctoral scholars who are learning from and with Detroit and Detroit-like places.

This is the final event in our 2012-13 series of colloquia exploring a Detroit School of Urban Studies. We would like to thank the interdisciplinary group of sponsors who made this and all of the events in our series possible. Principal support for the series came from the Distinguished Faculty and Graduate Student Seminars program of the Office of the Vice President for Research and the Rackham School of Graduate Studies, with additional financial support from the Taubman College of Architecture and Urban Planning, the Urban and Regional Planning Program, the School of Social Work, the Residential College, the Department of Afroamerican and African Studies, and the Sociology Department.

M For more information, please visit:
www.umich.edu/~detsch

MICHAEL MCCULLOCH

DETROIT'S OTHER INDUSTRY: REAL ESTATE AND THE CULTURE OF ELUSIVE SECURITY 1914-1929

Ph.D. Candidate, Architecture

Taubman College of Architecture and Urban Planning, University of Michigan

LAURA GULTEKIN

IN THEIR OWN WORDS: EXPLORING FAMILY HOMELESSNESS IN DETROIT

Ph.D. Candidate, Nursing

School of Nursing, University of Michigan

NICK RAJKOVICH

IS IT HOT IN CLEVELAND? ASSESSING AND REDUCING EXPOSURE TO THERMAL STRESS IN CUYAHOGA COUNTY, OHIO

Ph.D. Candidate, Urban and Regional Planning

Taubman College of Architecture and Urban Planning, University of Michigan

ERIC SEYMOUR

DESTROYING THE BUILT CITY: THE ROLE OF TAX FORECLOSURE IN DETROIT

Ph.D. Candidate, Urban and Regional Planning

Taubman College of Architecture and Urban Planning, University of Michigan

MEAGAN ELLIOTT

THE G WORD: UNDERSTANDING CULTURAL DEBATES ABOUT GENTRIFICATION IN DETROIT

Ph.D. Candidate, Sociology

College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, University of Michigan

LAURA CROMMELIN

DETROIT - A MODEL FOR UNRULY URBAN BRANDING?

Ph.D. Candidate, Built Environment

University of New South Wales

MATT WEBER

DETROIT IS LIKE CARACAS (SORT OF)

Ph.D. Candidate, Urban and Regional Planning

Taubman College of Architecture and Urban Planning, University of Michigan

NATALIE R SAMPSON

HEALTH & FREIGHT TRANSPORT IN THE U.S.:

PLANNING IN HOST COMMUNITIES & THE CASE OF DETROIT

Ph.D. Candidate, Health Behavior and Health Education

School of Public Health, University of Michigan

PATRICK COOPER-MCCANN

URBAN TRIAGE: PLANNING FOR DECLINE IN CLEVELAND AND ST. LOUIS IN THE 1970S

Ph.D. Pre-Candidate, Urban and Regional Planning

Taubman College of Architecture and Urban Planning, University of Michigan

LUCAS KIRKPATRICK

SACRIFICIAL CITIES: (UN)DEAD COMMUNITIES AND THE POLITICS OF POSSIBILITY IN DETROIT

Michigan Society of Fellows, Urban and Regional Planning

Taubman College of Architecture and Urban Planning, University of Michigan